

About MedLog*

Certification in Humanitarian Medical Logistics Practices (MedLog) is offered as part of the Fritz Institute/CILT (UK) Humanitarian Logistics Certification Programme. Developed for experienced humanitarian logisticians and medical specialists handling the medical supply, MedLog focuses on medical items' special supply chain requirements, with emphasis on preventing the introduction of counterfeit or substandard items to the supply chain.

MedLog is a distance learning course, and can be completed in 6 months, at an average of 5 hours a week. Candidates have access via email and Skype to experienced logistician coaches who support the student's progress throughout the course.

Who should participate?

MedLog is aimed at experienced logisticians and medical specialists handling the medical supply within humanitarian organisations.

How will you benefit?

After completing the course, medical specialists will be able to:

- ◆ Plan medical programmes with an understanding of what logistics can and cannot do for you, and the logistics implications of the Medical programme
- ◆ Handle the medical supply while following the supply chain and quality assurance requirements of medical items
- ◆ Make requests of logistics colleagues that are more informed and specific to ensure the medical supply is properly handled and quality assurance is maintained
- ◆ Add to your CV an internationally-recognised professional qualification from CILT (UK)

Logisticians will be able to:

- ◆ Plan and operate the medical supply chain with more confidence in your knowledge of the special technical and quality assurance requirements of the medical supply
- ◆ Advise medical programme planners on medical items' supply chain and quality assurance requirements
- ◆ Make more informed responses and get the information you need, sooner, when your medical programme colleagues request logistics support
- ◆ Add to your CV an internationally-recognised professional qualification from CILT (UK)
